Arnhem is a city and municipality situated in the eastern part of the Netherlands. It is the capital of the province of Gelderland, located on both banks of the rivers Nederrijn and Sint-Jansbeek, which was the source of the city's development. Arnhem had a population of 163.972 on 1 december 2021, which made it one of the larger cities of the Netherlands. The municipality is part of the Arnhem–Nijmegen metropolitan area which has a combined 736,500 inhabitants.

Arnhem is home to the Hogeschool van Arnhem en Nijmegen, ArtEZ Institute of the Arts, Netherlands Open Air Museum, Airborne Museum 'Hartenstein', Royal Burgers' Zoo, NOC*NSF and National Sports Centre Papendal. The north corner of the municipality is part of the Hoge Veluwe National Park. It is approximately 55 square kilometres (21 sq mi) in area, consisting of heathlands, sand dunes, and woodlands

Netherlands Open-air Museum

Located 4km to the north of Arnhem, this fantastic museum is one of the prime attractions in Arnhem and indeed the country.

Founded in 1912, the idea behind the museum was to preserve the traditional lifestyle and ways of the Dutch people living in a rural population.

Here you can see what it was like in previous eras for farmers, fisherman and craftsmen, and what they had to go through on a daily basis to survive.

See actual reconstructed buildings such as windmills and workshops, and watch people demonstrating age old techniques that would have been used centuries ago.

A truly wonderful educational museum, it is easy to see why this is such a popular attraction.

As the most famous and visited park in the city, Sonsbeek covers a vast expanse of open natural landscape with over 200 hectares of woodland, fields and park.

A bulk of this fabulous park is taken up with a beech forest – These stunning trees provide a great setting to walk through and admire the many ponds and fountains that are hidden here.

Two waterfalls are also present, one of which has a rock face that can be scaled (if you are careful!). Designed in the style of an English landscape garden, the forests, manicured lawns, and the beautiful white house building give this park an air of decadence and grandeur.

World War II plays a large role in the modern history of Arnhem – This city saw great amounts of conflict between English, Polish and German troops with a culmination at the Battle of Arnhem.

Due to this fact, Arnhem has many museums dedicated to the war, one of which is the Arnhem War Museum.

Located in the northern regions of Arnhem, this museum holds a wonderful array of war memorabilia, artefacts and vehicles.

The displays and exhibitions will transport you back in time, outside you can see various tanks, transporters and gun platforms, while inside there is a host of information about Arnhem and how the war was conducted here.

Also known as the Grote Kerk, St. Eusebius Church stands in the centre of Arnhem in the Kerkplein and has towered over the city since its construction in the 1500's.

Built in a Gothic style, the central bell tower stands at 93m making it the tallest structure in Arnhem – Visitors can take an elevator up to the top of the tower to view the cityscape of Arnhem in all its glory.

As the church was extensively damaged during WW2 there is a paratrooper memorial that hangs from the ceiling in the main aisle.

Furthermore, the crypts are open to the public and you can see several shallow graves and human remains.

Spanning the lower Rhine, this impressive arch bridge is named after Major-General John Frost who led British forces in the Battle of Arnhem to capture and defend the river in 1944. A bridge had been present at this location since the 1600's, and German forces rebuilt it to allow movement of their troops during WW2.

After the failed attempt of operation Market Garden and the subsequent liberation of Arnhem, a new bridge was constructed in the same style and design as the original.

Stroll across the expanse of this bridge, admire the lower Rhine River, and marvel at the ingenuity of this structure.

Another of Arnhem's fine military museums, the Airborne Museum is dedicated to the Battle of Arnhem and what transpired here and in the surrounding villages during operation Market Garden.

Hartenstein which is the building that the museum is hosted in served as the HQ for the British 1st Airborne Division, now it hosts a fabulous collection of military memorabilia and artefacts from the operation.

Furthermore, you will find videos, photographs and interviews with Allied soldiers that help you understand exactly what happened here and why it was such an important event.

Have a nice day in Arnhem!
